PRECISION

THE SPIRIT OF THE PELAGIC

At the core of Fourth Element's Pelagic diving watch lies the Sellita SW200, a movement of Swiss precision and reliability.

This automatic movement is the beating heart of the Pelagic, providing both accuracy and performance, even in the harshest underwater conditions. Engineered to be precise to depths up to 500 meters, the Sellita SW200 ensures that every second is captured, no matter how extreme the environment.

Its Swiss craftsmanship and robust design embody the spirit of the Pelagic, making it a watch built not just to survive the deep, but to conquer it with style and precision.

DESIGN

CRAFTED FOR THE DEEP

The case design of Fourth Element's Pelagic diving watch is a testament to both durability and elegance.

Crafted from brushed 316L stainless steel, the case offers a rugged yet refined aesthetic, built to withstand harsh underwater environments. At 9 o'clock, a discreet helium escape valve ensures that the watch remains uncompromised during deep dives, providing safety and reliability at depth. The sapphire crystal covering the dial offers clarity and scratch resistance, while the exhibition caseback allows a glimpse into the Swiss-made Sellita SW200 movement.

This thoughtful combination of strength and sophistication makes the Pelagic as visually striking as it is functional, perfect for adventurers who appreciate precision and style.
